Each of the above trademarks, and any other trademarks owned by Special Olympics may only be used with written authorization from Special Olympics International. Since use of the trademarks by another charity could confuse the donating public, Special Olympics may choose not to license a trademark even if it will benefit another worthwhile charity. If anyone learns of an activity, event or fundraiser that uses any of the Special Olympics trademarks, please notify your local Special Olympics Torch Run Liaison. If Special Olympics decides to authorize use of the trademark to another organization, Special Olympics International will provide a written authorization in the form of a trademark license signed by Special Olympics International. By only allowing use of the Special Olympics trademarks with a written license, Special Olympics protects the trademarks, ensuring that donors know that these events support Special Olympics and thereby allowing Special Olympics Programs and athletes to continue to benefit from each trademark. We appreciate your support and assistance with this effort.
